Greg Secker to give keynote speech at National Achievers Congress

Greg Secker, the entrepreneur who founded the multi-million pound trader coaching company Knowledge to Action, will outline his pioneering method for financial success when he speaks at the London's first ever National Achievers Congress this weekend.

Secker, whose company has helped thousands of UK workers move into stock market and foreign exchange trading from home, will deliver a keynote speech about wealth generation on the third day of the congress at London Excel, which runs from 11-13 June.

He will challenge the notion that time equals money, arguing instead that it is not necessary for people to work longer and harder in order to increase their personal wealth.

Having retired as vice-president of leading US asset management firm Mellon Financial Corporation at the age of just 28, Secker set up a trading floor at home and established his educational company in 2003 teaching ordinary people to develop an immediate income from trading.

Knowledge to Action, which runs Live Trading Floor, Traders University and the Ultimate Forex Programme, is now the largest organisation of its kind in Europe, and Secker is regularly called upon to provide market analysis for broadcasters such as CNBC and Bloomberg.

He also spoke alongside former British Prime Minister Tony Blair when the National Achievers Congress visited Singapore in April.

Secker said: "With the current climate of shrinking property prices, constipated credit markets and falling interest on savings accounts, many people are seeking a more effective and safer way to manage their investments. I'm passionate about sharing my experience on international trading floors and showing people what they can gain from trading. The National Achievers Congress is a fantastic opportunity to introduce people to that."

Robert Kiyosaki and his wife Kim Kiyosaki, the bestselling international authors, are the headline speakers at this weekend's conference. Other experts addressing the audience will include property investor and star of Channel 4's The Secret Millionaire Kevin Green, leading motivational speaker John P Coutis and internet business 'wonder boy' Ewen Chia.
